Travel Adventure

One of the advantages Australia has over most other tourist destinations is that being one of the few countries situated beyond the Tropic Of Capricorn in the southern hemisphere, it experiences seasons which are the opposite of what would normally be experienced by the major continents of North America, Europe and most of the rest of the populated countries.

Hence, when it is the cold winter season in those countries, it would be the warm and welcoming summer period in Australia. This would invariably draw the tourists from these countries who are seeking an escape from the harsh cold weather in their own countries to Australia looking for adventure.

With its large land mass and relatively small population, Australia is the perfect spot for those who are seeking a vacation which is different from the usual because driving from one end of the continent to the other will enable one to experience vastly different weather conditions.

For example, the tropical regions in the north generally have high temperatures with high humidity and distinct wet and dry seasons. The central plains of the country are dominated by dry, desert regions. As you travel down south, the temperature becomes more moderate and that also includes the rainfall. Hence, the summers are not as sizzling hot as that experienced in other continents partly because Australia lacks very high mountains and enjoys the presence of warming oceans around its coastal regions.

Australia's biggest attraction is its natural beauty with a landscape that changes from the dense tropical rainforests to endless sun-baked horizons to beautiful southern beaches as one travels from north to south.

One of the best ways to fully appreciate this natural beauty is to get the services of an Australian campervan hire company such as Camperman Australia.

Enjoying a vacation by camper hire is indeed a unique experience which would create lasting memories as well as allow for a lot of family bonding which is generally not possible on the usual family vacation to major cities crowded with sightseeing and shopping activities.

To quote Mary Nightingale, an ITV presenter who wrote an article entitled “Australia by Campervan” for The Telegraph, on 26 January, 2013:

“But there’s just something about it. Something beguiling about being totally mobile, about carrying your house with you, about having total freedom to decide where to go and where to stay, about having a fridge full of food and a bed always within reach, about heading off on the open road – yes, all the clichés. And Australia is a great place to do it.”
